Leave and Time Off Policy

Internal policy document | Confidential

1. Types of Leave

Employees may be eligible for annual paid leave, sick leave, parental leave, bereavement leave, and other state-specific or local leave programs as required by law. Managers must coordinate staffing plans to maintain continuity of operations.

Employees should request leave as early as practical and comply with the required notice periods for planned time off. Unscheduled absences should be reported according to the emergency attendance procedures.

2. Documentation and Approval

Leave requests must be submitted using the designated system and approved by the employee's manager before the absence begins unless circumstances prevent advance approval. Medical documentation may be required for absences beyond a defined threshold.

Misrepresentation of leave eligibility, falsification of records, or repeated unauthorized absences may result in corrective action, up to and including termination of employment.
